

Retain or Release?

A Man's Guide to Sexual Energy Mastery

Men, should we retain? Or release?

*I'm going to tell you why this conversation matters,
and why most of you are leaking your power
without even knowing it.*

The Real Talk About Your Life Force

Sexual energy is not just about sex.

It's your raw life force, the same current that fuels creativity, drive, physical vitality, and spiritual awakening.

This is the juice that built civilizations, wrote symphonies, and moves mountains.

When you ejaculate, you're releasing a dense package of nutrients, hormones, and electromagnetic charge. Zinc, B vitamins, proteins, testosterone, dopamine – all flooding out of your system in seconds.

That's why after sex or masturbation you can feel drained, flat... and even a bit shit. Your nervous system just dumped its premium fuel.

But the thing nobody's telling you is: Retention isn't about never releasing – it's about learning to own the current instead of being run by it.

You know what I mean... You'll have those times when you feel full of energy, restless, charged almost. You might not even want to have sex but your body is screaming for release. Why?

Because your body is wired for discharge.

In primal terms, ejaculation = reproduction, and that programming runs deep.

That energy you feel before you "knock one out"?
That's pure life force.

And when you've got so much of it that your nervous system feels too full, it's like having a phone battery stuck at 100%, still plugged in with no outlet for the overflow – except you ARE the battery.

If you don't know how to move this energy, your default will always be to "let it out" through busting a nut.

But when you learn to move that energy through your body instead of out of it, it feeds your brain, your heart, your ambition, and your clarity.

What Most Men Don't Understand About Energy

Your sexual energy and your creative energy is the same source. Your drive to build something meaningful and your drive to procreate? It's all the same.

The ancient Taoists knew this. They called it "jing" - your essential life essence. Spend it carelessly, and you're literally spending your vitality. Learn to cultivate it, and you become unstoppable.

Think about it: Have you ever noticed how your best ideas, your clearest thinking, your strongest motivation often comes when you're sexually charged but not releasing?

That's not coincidence - that's biology working as designed.

The Real Benefits of Retention (Beyond the Recent Hype)

Let's cut through the internet bullshit and tell you what actually happens when you learn energy mastery:

Increased Capacity - Your nervous system learns to hold more intensity without tipping into anxiety, irritability, or compulsive behaviour. You become unshakeable.

Magnetic Presence - People feel the charge in your energy field. Women sense it. Men respect it. You walk into rooms differently.

Mental Clarity & Focus - Hormones and neurotransmitters stay in your system longer. Your brain gets premium fuel instead of running on fumes.

Physical Vitality - More energy for the gym, for work, for life. You stop needing stimulants to feel awake.

Emotional Stability - Less mood swings, less reactivity. You respond from center instead of reacting from depletion.

Spiritual Depth - Sexual energy IS kundalini energy. When moved consciously, it lights up the higher centers. This is how saints and sages accessed altered states apparently.

Creative Power - That urge to create, to build, to express - it comes from the same well as sexual desire. Retain the energy, amplify the creativity.

An important note is that: this doesn't mean you have to stop masturbating or having sex. Organically, you'll want to do it less. But retention is about mastery, not deprivation.

The Shadow Side Nobody Talks About

If you're just white-knuckling through retention without doing the inner work, you're setting yourself up for problems.

Spiritual Bypassing - Using retention to avoid feeling your emotions or dealing with your shit. The energy gets stuck, and you become rigid, judgmental, or explosive.

Energy Stagnation - If you retain but don't circulate, you can become irritable, aggressive, or develop physical symptoms. The energy needs to move.

Perfectionist Trap - Beating yourself up every time you release, creating shame cycles that are worse than the original habit.

Avoiding Intimacy - Using retention as an excuse to avoid real connection or vulnerable sex with partners.

The goal isn't to become a monk. It's to become conscious.

If You Choose to Retain: The Practice

Here's how you actually work with this energy instead of just suppressing it when you feel the urge:

Energy Circulation (The Foundation)

1. Sit or stand tall, spine straight. This creates the channel for energy to flow.
2. Breathe deeply into your belly, slow and steady. Four counts in, hold for two, four counts out.
3. Contract your pelvic floor muscles gently (as if to stop taking a piss mid-stream). This is your energetic "lock" - it keeps the energy from leaking out.

- 4. On the inhale, visualise the energy rising up the back of your spine to the crown of your head. Feel it like golden light or electricity.
- 5. On the exhale, let it flow down the front of your body into your heart and lower belly. This completes the circuit.
- 6. Continue for 5-10 minutes or until the intensity feels spread evenly through your body, not just concentrated in your groin.

This teaches your system that high charge can be held and circulated, not just dumped.

The Cold Shower Protocol

When you're feeling charged and restless:

- 1. Take a cold shower for 2-3 minutes.
- 2. Breathe deeply the entire time - don't hold your breath.
- 3. Focus on relaxing into the discomfort instead of tensing against it.
- 4. End with 30 seconds of the coldest water possible.

This trains your nervous system to handle intensity without discharge. It's like doing push-ups for your energy system.

Masturbating Without Ejaculation:

The Advanced Practice

My Brother, this is sexual mastery - actually enjoying the pleasure without losing the seed.

The Technique

- 1. Begin self-stimulation slowly, keeping awareness on your breath and your whole body.
- 2. As you approach the point of no return, pause ALL movement. This takes practice and awareness.
- 3. Contract your pelvic floor while inhaling the sensation up your spine. Visualise it flooding your chest, head, and third eye with light.
- 4. Let the arousal drop slightly before continuing. You can repeat this cycle as long as you want.
- 5. End when you choose to end, not when your body forces you to.

This leaves you energised, alert, and full rather than depleted. It's next level, but it requires real practice.

What to Expect

- First few times will be frustrating. Your body is used to one pattern. Be patient.
- You might experience "blue balls" initially. This passes as your energy system adapts.
- The pleasure becomes more full-body and less genital-focused over time.
- You'll start to crave this more than regular orgasm because it actually feeds you instead of draining you.

If You Choose to Release:

Do It Consciously

If you're going to masturbate or have sex with ejaculation, do it like a man with intention, not like a boy who can't help himself. The Conscious Release Protocol

No Porn - It fractures your attention, rewires your arousal patterns, and weakens your energetic imprint. Porn creates addicts, not masters.

Set Your Intention First - Why are you doing this? To release pressure? To connect with yourself? To explore pleasure? Be clear, not compulsive.

Create Sacred Space - Dim lights, no distractions, maybe some music. Treat this like the powerful act it is.

Stay Present - Feel every sensation in your body. Keep your breath slow and deep. Keep awareness on your whole body, not just your genitals.

Breathe Through It - Don't hold your breath during climax. Breathe the sensation through your entire system.

Honor the Aftermath - Don't immediately scroll your phone or jump into activity. Sit with what just happened. Feel the shift in your energy.

I know I know how it sounds... But this is not wanking lol. This is a deep connection with yourself both physically and spiritually.

The Relationship Factor:

If you're in a relationship, this work becomes both easier and more complex.

Communicate with Your Partner - Don't just spring retention on them without explanation. Share what you're learning and why it matters to you.

Practice Together - Tantric practices, breathwork, conscious touch without goal-oriented sex. This deepens intimacy beyond anything most couples experience.

Don't Make It About Control - If retention becomes a way to control or withhold from your partner, you're missing the point entirely.

Sacred Sex - When you do have sex, make it ceremonial. Set intentions together. Breathe together. Make love to each other's souls, not just bodies. (You can still fuck by the way)

The Conscious Woman - A woman who understands energy work can help you circulate and amplify your charge. Together, you create something that neither could access alone.

The Integration Challenge

This isn't just about sex – it's about how you show up in every area of your life.

In Business – That same energy that drives sexual desire drives ambition. Learn to channel it toward your mission instead of wasting it on mindless scrolling or consumption.

In Relationships – When you're not depleted, you show up as a source of strength rather than someone who needs constant validation.

In Physical Training – Your workouts become more intense, your recovery faster, your body composition improves naturally.

In Spiritual Practice – Meditation deepens, intuition sharpens, connection to something greater becomes visceral rather than intellectual.

The Seasons of Practice

This isn't a one-size-fits-all practice. Your needs change with seasons, stress levels, life circumstances, and age.

High-Stress Periods - Sometimes release is necessary for nervous system regulation. Don't be rigid.

Creative Projects - During big creative pushes, retention can fuel unprecedented focus and output.

Relationship Phases - New relationships might call for more sexual expression. Long-term partnerships might benefit from retention and energy work.

Life Transitions - Times of major change often require different approaches to energy management.
The key is awareness, not dogma.

Common Pitfalls and How to Avoid Them

The All-or-Nothing Trap - Missing the point that this is about mastery, not perfection. Progress is all we want.

Spiritual Ego - Thinking retention makes you better than other men. No. It makes you more conscious, not superior.

Energy Stagnation - Retaining without circulating. The energy must move or it becomes toxic.

Avoiding the Shadow - Using retention to bypass emotional work or trauma healing. The energy will amplify whatever is unresolved.

Performance Anxiety - Making it about numbers (days retained) instead of energy mastery and life enhancement.

When to Seek Support

This work can bring up deep patterns, trauma, and emotional material.

Consider working with:

Energy Healers who understand sexual energy and kundalini awakening

Trauma-Informed Therapists especially if you have sexual trauma or shame patterns

Experienced Teachers who have walked this path and can guide you through the challenges

Men's Groups where you can share the journey with other brothers doing this work

The Ultimate Question

Here's what I want you to ask yourself: Who would you be if you weren't constantly leaking your most potent energy?

What would you create? How would you love? What risks would you take? How would you show up in the world?

This isn't about becoming a different person – it's about becoming who you actually are when you're running on premium fuel instead of basic fumes.

My Final Word

Retention isn't about being a monk or following some social media guru's 90-day challenge.

It's about mastery over your own charge so you can decide whether you want to release or circulate - without being run by habit, urge, or unconscious programming.

Over time, the more energy you can hold, the more life you can hold: more money, more love, more power, more presence, more purpose.

And once you've mastered it alone, if you find conscious women to practice with... you'll both create magic that most people never even dream of.

But remember - no one can do the push-ups for you, my friend. The work is yours to do. The choice is yours to make. The power is yours to claim or leak away.

I always say it but - Where you are now does not have to be where you end up.

The question is: What are you going to do with this information?

This is advanced work. Start where you are, be patient with the process, and remember that mastery takes time. The truth is hard to hear, but we already knew it.

If you have any questions, I'm always reachable.

All the love,

