

THE INTEGRATION JOURNAL

COMPANION

Most people don't have a knowledge problem.
They have an integration problem.

You keep listening to the podcasts, reading the books, watching the reels, saving the quotes. You feel something shift for a moment...
then nothing changes.

Because inspiration feels good, but embodiment takes work.
Knowledge is not power until it's lived.

Until your nervous system recognises it as truth.
Integration is the bridge between what you know and how you live.

This journal will help you build that bridge.

You can use it after consuming anything—one of my posts, a book, a quote, a conversation, or something you saw online that hit you deep.

HOW TO USE THIS JOURNAL COMPANION

This is a tool designed to help you live what you're learning, and not just think you understand it.

Use it any time you've read, watched, or heard something that hit deep and moved something real in you.

The goal isn't to write a neat essay.

The goal is to get honest and get your thoughts and feelings on paper.

STEP 1 - ASK: IS THIS MY MEDICINE?

Not everything that sounds good is for you.

Take a breath. Feel your body. Ask yourself:

- Does this teaching actually speak to me, or do I just like how it sounds?
- Can I realistically live this?
- Does this land in my body or just my mind?

If your body contracts or goes numb, it's not your medicine.

Let it go.

If your body expands, softens, or feels charged with energy...keep it.

That's the signal.

Integration starts when your body says yes.

STEP 2 - LIVE IT IN SMALL WAYS

Choose one simple way to apply what you learned.
Start small. Be real with yourself.

Ask:

- How can I live this today?
- What one behaviour or thought pattern does this challenge in me?
- How will I remind myself of this when I forget?

The mind will try to make it complex. The ego will try to rush it.
Ignore both. Integration happens in repetition, not intensity.

STEP STEP 3 - REFLECT REGULARLY

Once a week (minimum), check in.

Ask yourself:

- Have I actually lived this or just thought about it?
- What has shifted in me since I started?
- What resistance am I still feeling?
- Is this still my medicine or has it served its purpose?

Like I said before - Be honest, no point bullshitting yourself.
This is where you turn awareness into wisdom.

STEP 4 - EMBODY AND MOVE ON

When the teaching becomes natural i.e. when you no longer need to remind yourself... THAT'S when it's integrated.

Don't overthink it. You've become it. Move on.

Find the next medicine.

Layer by layer, brick by brick.

Integration isn't about chasing lessons.

It's about becoming the lesson.

YOUR WEEKLY CHECK-IN

What did I consume this week that stood out?

Is it my medicine? How do I know?

How did I embody it?

What impact did I notice?

Where did I avoid it? Why?

What will I focus on next?
